2. What will you do (or have you done) to assess your girls' interests?

3. Your girls want to hold a pizza party. So, how can you guide them to Discover, Connect, or Take Action? Of the four correct choices below, pick the one you would be most likely to use.

- A) Let them hold the party however they plan it - at least they are showing some initiative and having fun with each other!
- B) During the pizza party, ask prompting questions to start discussion that allows them to discover more about themselves and connect with each other.
- C) While they are planning the party, encourage the girls to bring along a special family side dish and invite a Daisy troop to teach them about different cultures in the world.
- D) Before they plan the party, ask the girls how they can use the pizza party to connect with others or take action to make the world a better place.

(Note: All of the above answers are correct. Think about the best answer for your troop.)
You know your girls best. Perhaps you can be very direct with them about developing their leadership skills. Or maybe they really do need a break to just relax and have fun. Just remember that most activities should incorporate one of the 3 keys.
